

COLMA CITIZENS PETITION BOARD FOR ANNEXATION

The city council met Monday evening, with all present and Mayor H. H. Smith in the chair.

A delegation of residents of Colma were present and presented a petition with 105 names attached, in favor of annexation to Daly City. As the papers were properly drafted and signed, the board decided to hold an election in Colma on October 8, 1927, at Jefferson Hall, between the hours of 7 a. m. and 7 p. m.

Mr. James Casey, one of the petitioners, thanked the city council for their action and stated a desire for the success of this plan as a progressive move.

The California League of Municipality sent notice of a meeting to be held in Sacramento from September 19 to September 23, and invited Daly City to send a delegate. There being another meeting of the board before this convention, action was deferred until that time.

The State Board of Health notified the council of a meeting to be held during the League of Municipality convention. The same was referred to the health officer, Dr. A. Rankin.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company was granted permission to erect several poles for the extension of service, after the members of the board had studied the maps presented. The council extended great praise to our Police Chief J. Doyle on the removal of several shacks in the last few weeks.

As notices are posted on shacks by either the health officer or city council, stating such places are condemned, the real task is to locate the owner to legally notify them of the same, and this the police department has done with great skill.

After all salaries and bills for the month were ordered paid, the board adjourned to meet again September 12th.

CHILDREN ENJOY BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. Elizabeth Hatzke was hostess at a children's party on Wednesday, August 17, in honor of the birthday of her little nephew, Kurt Scheel. The party was held at Mrs. Hatzke's home, 47 East Lake avenue. Refreshments were served and afterwards games were played that all enjoyed. The lucky winners were Frances Nelson, May Siebrecht, Frank Lakey and Tommy Bergens. The table was beautifully decorated with sweet peas and pink baby roses. The other children present included Misses Frances Nelson, Juanita Nelson, Lillian Nelson, Leone Brooks, Matilda Farber, May Siebrecht, Beatrice Sotter, of Healdsburg, Ross John McLennon, Crawford McLennon and Douglas McLennon, of San Francisco; Raymond Widasky, Frank Lahey, Tommy Bergens, Billy Coon. Others present were Mrs. A. Scheel, of Miriam street, grandmother of little Kurt, Mrs. Max Schmidt, of San Francisco. Kurt was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

ADULTS' CLASSES GIVEN AT NIGHT

The Jefferson night school is now in full swing, opening last Tuesday night. All classes will meet two nights a week, Tuesdays and Thursdays, throughout the school year.

A class in Americanization has already been organized and classes in bookkeeping, typing, orchestra, and auto-mechanics will be organized if the enrollment is sufficient. Classes will also be formed in other subjects if there is sufficient demand. In order to maintain a night school class, the attendance must not fall below twelve.

Night school classes are for the purpose of giving adults beyond day school age an opportunity to continue their education. In the case of orchestra, however, special permission may be granted to others to take this work in the evenings because it is not given during the day session.

BOARD DISCUSSES SCHOOL EQUIPMENT

New school equipment was the principal subject discussed by the Board of Education at its meeting on Wednesday evening, August 17.

Two bids for the construction of the tennis courts have been received, and as soon as the third one is received the courts will be finished.

When the specifications on the drain for the football field is approved, the contract will be let and the turf will be in good condition.

A new pump is being installed and the school will soon have its own water supply.

Money has also been appropriated for supplies for the shop, including a boring machine and lathe.

LOCAL LIONS PLAN ENTERTAINMENTS

Monday's meeting of the Daly City Lions was featured by plans for a series of entertainments, looking toward a definite program of civic welfare. The evening of Saturday, September 17, has been set for an entertainment and dance to be held at Eagles' Hall, and the following committee is already active in planning a successful and entertaining affair: Dr. W. J. Lanthearne, Dr. F. P. Callen and Stephen Pfeifer.

The "Get a Member" campaign previously outlined is progressing successfully and a number of new Lions will shortly roar at the weekly luncheon meetings, and add new strength to the Lions' determination to promote community betterments.

SPLENDID SERVICE AT M. E. CHURCH

Our teacher training class began Wednesday with a good attendance. The pastor is hoping that this will become a permanent affair, and that not only the teachers of the Sunday school will be in attendance, but everyone that is interested in the development of the child. Folks are invited to bring their basket lunch to the Daly City Methodist church at 6:15 and enjoy the fellowship of that hour, and then to follow the class through its first book, "The Principles of Religious Teaching."

The pastor expects to organize before many days the Y. M. C. A. organizations for boys. The Friendly Indians, for boys from 9 to 12, and the Pioneers, for boys from 12 to 15. It will mean hours of good times together, hikes, etc. Any boy of the community wishing to enroll, please hand in your name to the pastor. This is not limited to the boys of the Sunday school, but to all boys wishing a clean time.

Those of you who missed the services last Sunday, missed one of the best evangelistic messages of the hour. Mrs. E. J. Clinton, a member of the Hamilton Methodist church, and a woman who has been preaching in the leading Methodist churches of the city, brought the evening message to us. It was a real inspiration for us all, and challenged us to finer, cleaner, nobler living. The congregation was large, and everyone enjoyed the special solo by Mrs. Clarice Olson.

The attendance at the Sunday school was the largest it has been for many a day, and if it continues as it is now going, will reach the hundred mark before Conference, which is now but three Sundays off.

The Bible class and the High school class is growing rapidly. If you come once you will come again.

Don't forget that we are now conducting morning services, and we invite you to be present Sunday to enjoy the service with us.

Sunday morning the pastor's subject will be, "Which is the Longest Part of the Journey?"

In the evening the subject will be, "With Christ on the Indian Road."

The Epworth League Alliance of San Mateo county will lead the Epworth League Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. Some of the outstanding leaders among the young people for the entire county will be present. All the young people of the community are invited to come. You can't afford to miss it.

ELLIOTT L. FISHER, Pastor.

DAILY CITY WOMAN DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Funeral services for the late Mrs. Mary Ann Phair, of Daly City, who died at her home Monday following a lingering illness, was held Wednesday at 9 o'clock. High requiem mass was celebrated at St. Maximus church at 9:30 o'clock. She was laid to rest in the National cemetery in the Presidio, by the remains of her husband.

Her death came as the aftermath of a shock received when her husband and son were killed in an accident.

Mrs. Phair is survived by four daughters, Mrs. C. Simon, Mrs. D. Monette, Mrs. J. O'Malley, Mrs. P. Hardesty, and a son, Clarence Jacobs.

PIONEER WOMAN PASSES AFTER A USEFUL CAREER

Mrs. Lucy Jane Stedman died at her home at 261 Los Banos avenue, Daly City, Sunday, August 21, 1927, from the effects of a paralytic stroke. She had reached the age of 81 years, 7 months, and 16 days.

Mrs. Stedman was an early pioneer of Marin county, coming as a bride from her home in Massachusetts in 1869 to Lagunitas, Marin county, where her husband, the late Stephen Stedman, was engaged in the lumber business. Following his death in 1901, she came to San Francisco to live with her children, and moved to Daly City in 1914.

She was well known for her philanthropic work, and worked for the crippled children at the Shriners' hospital and the Children's hospital. Her work also reached the Old Peoples' Home and the disabled soldiers in the hospitals.

She won distinction at the time of the World war for her extensive knitting, and was presented with a medal by the Red Cross for her wonderful record of knitting.

She made four trips across the continent, and three years ago she toured the East with her daughter, Mrs. Sturtevant. They covered 8,000 miles, touring twenty-six states, going twice into Canada, returning home by the Canadian Rockies and Vancouver.

She is survived by six children: Mrs. Clifford Du Jardin, of San Francisco; Mrs. Julia Sturtevant, of Daly City; Mrs. Robert Stedman, of Sebastopol; Mrs. George MacDonald, of Daly City; Mrs. Horace Rothwell, of San Francisco; and Mrs. Harold A. Davenport, of Berkeley.

She was the proud grandmother of fourteen grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

The funeral services were held on Wednesday at 2 o'clock from the Chapel at Cypress Lawn Memorial Park. Her eight grandsons, Clifford Du Jardin, Jr., Rodney Sturtevant, Harold Davenport, Robert Stedman, Jr., Alvin Stedman, Leroy Stedman, Herbert Rothwell, and George MacDonald, walked by the side of the casket from the Chapel to the grave in Cypress Lawn cemetery, where she was laid to rest.

NEW PRINCIPAL TAKES CHARGE OF SCHOOL

Mr. James Ferguson, the new principal at Jefferson Union high school, has an enviable record as an educator, and there is no doubt that he will prove popular and successful as the head of our up-to-date high school.

Mr. Ferguson graduated from Stanford University in 1899 and received his Master's Degree in 1901.

His first position as a teacher was in Redding, California. Then he advanced to principal of the Petaluma high school and held this position for three years.

Following this he was in the San Francisco school department for eight years as high school principal and deputy superintendent.

From 1915 to 1920, Mr. Ferguson was principal and deputy county superintendent of schools in the Coachella high school of Riverside county.

In 1908 Mr. Ferguson went to Europe as a member of the Mosely Education Commission, which visited the schools of Great Britain, France, and Germany, in order to study their organization and methods of work.

Two years ago, as a representative to the National Education Association, he made another trip to Europe to attend the World Federation of Education in Edinburgh, Scotland, where there were other representatives from all over the world. He visited France and the British Isles again before returning to the United States.

Mr. Ferguson has always been an exponent of modern ideas of education. He believes that equal opportunity should be given to all students who are preparing for industry and commercial lines and those who are going on to college. But whatever line of work is done under his direction, he believes in the greatest thoroughness.

He expresses his belief as follows: "The interest of the students demand the very best effort. My whole philosophy of education is centered around the one point that the interest of the student should be the first consideration. Schools are organized for the students, and the teachers are employed for the students; therefore the students' interests are paramount."

Entertains Relatives

Mr. and Mrs. L. Grenel and Miss I. Trier, cousins of Mr. Trier, were visiting him at his home in Daly City this week. They arrived from Wisconsin on Sunday. On Tuesday the visitors left, to continue their motor trip to Los Angeles.

TEST CERTIFICATE PLAN OF BETTING ON HORSE RACES

Superior Judge George H. Buck is expected to hand down a decision in a few days in the habeas corpus proceedings instituted Monday by James S. McDonald, San Francisco sportsman, following his arrest at the Tanforan race track for alleged violation of the anti-betting laws of the state.

A brief was filed yesterday with Superior Judge Buck at Redwood City by Walter H. Linforth, attorney for McDonald, in which he declared that his client had not made a "bet" Monday in putting up $10 on a mare by the name of Crescent in a race at Tanforan, and drawing down $12.50 after the thoroughbred had won.

A brief was filed earlier in the week by District Attorney Franklin Swart in which Swart contended that McDonald had made an "investment" on Crescent in the expectation that he would have more money after the race than before if he made a wise "pick," and that the transaction must be construed as a bet or wager.

Linforth contended that his client had evaded the anti-betting statute, but that courts of other states have held that the successful evasion of law is not a violation. He placed emphasis on the provision of the "certificate" purchased by McDonald that there was no assurance of the return of the original amount or any increment.

The arrest of McDonald was pre-arranged by officials of the San Francisco Jockey Club, which will hold a season of racing at Tanforan if the "certificate plan" of wagering is found permissible under California laws.

District Attorney Franklin Swart and his assistant, Edmund Scott, drew up briefs to be submitted to the court. Swart stated that the people have no appeal to the higher court in the event of McDonald being freed, and declared that it would mean that no arrests on similar charges would be made, because the court would have expressed its attitude regarding the case.

LOCAL MASONS ENJOY THEIR ANNUAL PICNIC

The annual picnic of Crocker Lodge No. 454, F. & A. M., was held last Sunday at Searsville Lake, those who attended declaring it to be one of the most successful outings in the history of the local Masonic lodge.

The trip down the peninsula was made by auto, the start being from Hillcrest Drive and Mission street, where cars capable of caring for all who desired to make the trip had assembled.

In addition to the picnic spread, games, races and other amusements were arranged by the capable committee, and the outing was thoroughly enjoyed by at least five hundred men, women and children.

FOPPIANO-TACCHI WEDDING

Miss Clara Foppiano, of Daly City, and Mr. Emilio Tacchi, of South San Francisco, were united in marriage by the Rev. Flegat at the Grace M. E. church at Twenty-first and Capp streets, on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, August 21.

Hester Blylock, who has grown up with the bride and is one of her closest friends, acted as maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Clara Barsotti, cousin of the bride, and Miss Inez Tacchi, sister of the groom. The bride was given away by her father, Mr. R. F. Foppiano.

Frank Foppiano stood up with the groom as best man. The bride was dressed entirely in white. Her dress was of white georgette over white silk. Her veil was of wonderful fine white lace with an embroidered edge. It was attached by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white roses.

The maid of honor was dressed in orchid georgette trimmed in bead's lace. She wore a picture hat of orchid and orchid sweet peas formed her bouquet.

The dresses of the bridesmaids were alike, except that Miss Barsotti's was of three shades of green, while Miss Tacchi's was in three corresponding shades of peach georgette. They carried pink sweet peas.

Mrs. L. Torre, of Berkeley, was the soloist.

A dinner was given for the bridal party, immediately after the wedding, at the home of the bride, 539 Evergreen avenue. At 8 o'clock a reception for the newly wedded couple was given at Company No. 4 fire house, on Peoria, near Evergreen.

The couple left Monday morning on a honeymoon trip to Los Angeles, and upon their return will live in Daly City, on Santa Barbara avenue, near Park avenue. Many beautiful wedding presents were received by the young couple and they will be able to start house-keeping as soon as they return from Los Angeles.

RECOGNIZE WORTH OF ABLE EDUCATOR

The good news has come this way that Roy W. Cloud, for many years our popular and efficient county superintendent of schools, and, since his resignation of county office about two years ago, the district superintendent of the elementary schools of Redwood City, has won the appointment of secretary of the California Teachers' Association, a position state wide in work and carrying with it a salary of $7,200 a year and traveling expenses.

Mr. Cloud is peculiarly well fitted for such a position, being a fairly good writer and a pleasing speaker, besides he is gifted with the power of successfully smoothing over difficulties that always arise.

In the past he has done much to improve and elevate the dignity of the school teachers' profession. It has been through his efforts to a pronounced extent that the schools of this county and their teachers stand so high in their excellence.

The buildings are commodious and comfortable, the course of study pursued produces commendable results, and the teachers are decently paid, because Mr. Cloud worked, early and late, for many years, with the sole idea of such a happy condition in view. Others painted the picture of what ought to be, but it remained for him to bring about the reality, and he did it without hope of personal recompense. However, his reward has come, and the people of his home county are a unit in extending to him their warmest congratulations.

He is another fine example of those great leaders who have risen from the ranks. Having learned by experience the ins and outs of the way up, he will never be at loss to know the right way to solve the problems that will come to him in the course of administration of his high position.

It is fortunate for the schools and teachers of the state to have a person of his ability as secretary of the California Teachers' Association.

OIL STATION THIEF CAPTURED BY DOYLE

Chief Doyle has captured the thief who broke into the Standard Oil station at School and Mission streets.

Walter Jones, a former employee at the service station, was traced by means of finger-prints, and his signed confession is in the hands of Chief of Police Doyle. Jones confessed that he entered the service station on Sunday, August 15, between 1:30 and 2 a. m. He broke a window to gain entrance. About $53 was stolen, and he claims to have spent the money.

Paul Roland, alias Paul Buba, who broke into several local stores recently, has been caught by the sheriff and has confessed to numerous robberies. Judge Buck sentenced him to twelve years in San Quentin.

Chief of Police Doyle warns people to keep outside windows closed and to take in ladders. The night officer finds many easily accessible windows open, which offer easy chances to any light-fingered persons.

If at any time you need a local officer, call Randolph 55, day or night.

Subject for next Lord's day evening, "Are we Paying too Much?"

Mrs. McNair's solo last Sabbath evening was most helpful to all and many spoke words of appreciation and are hoping that soon we may hear her sing again.

Our violin players were back on the job again last Sabbath and helped with the spiritual song service.

The attendance last Sunday was fine. The people are getting home from vacations and are not forgetting the church.

We are promised some special music again next Sabbath. Come and hear it.

BOARD HOLDS UP ROAD ACTION IN FACE OF PROTEST

Protests filed by property owners caused the county board of supervisors to postpone until September 19 action on the formation of a district to finance construction of the Alameda de las Pulgas. The protestants were represented by Attorney David Cosgrove and included Mrs. Carmalita Birttain Kendall, K. A. Winter, Franklin Swart and Brewer, Hare & Clark.

District Attorney Swart, who lived in the proposed district, said he wanted a clear understanding of the policy of the county in the construction of public roads, particularly in regards to the assessment of property owners for such improvements.

Fred H. Drake, president of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, spoke at length in favor of action on the proposed highway. He declared that more people are needed in San Mateo county, and the only way to bring them here is to open up more property.

Roy McGain, who is interested in several large realty developments, also stressed the necessity of immediately providing more roads and said that opening of the Alameda de las Pulgas would provide growth and development beyond comprehension of the most ardent Peninsula booster.

Attorney Charles N. Kirkbride and County Surveyor George A. Kneese explained the project in detail, and the former brought out the fairness of the Matoon act, under which the highway work is to be financed. It was stated that the work includes construction of a highway six miles in length from the Crystal Springs road, near the San Mateo county relief home, to the Woodside road, where it will connect up with the present Alameda de las Pulgas and continue on the property of the Stanford University.

A thorough right-of-way, 70 feet in width, has already been secured. The roadway will be 48 feet in width, with a paved portion of 30 feet, the remainder being in gravel shoulders. The total cost of the improvement will be $498,000, with assessments as low as $5 per acre.

After the discussion, Supervisor C. V. Thompson moved that the matter be continued until September 19, in order to permit a thorough investigation by all persons concerned, the motion being carried.

FOUR NEW TEACHERS AT JEFFERSON HIGH

Jefferson Union high school has four new teachers this semester, taking the place of those who severed their connection with the school at the close of the last semester.

Miss Eunice Sohl, in charge of the girls' physical education, received her training in the Northwestern College of Illinois. This is her second year of teaching, her first year being at the Eldridge high school of Sonoma county, teaching physical training.

Mr. J. Jones of the English department has had the advantage of receiving his education in all parts of the country. After six years of training in the East, five years at the Denominational College of Kansas, and one year at the Yale University of Massachusetts, he came to California. Here he went to the University of California for one-half a year and attended the Stanford summer session. While in college he tutored for three years and then taught English and mathematics three more years in the Kerman high school of Fresno county. He was also principal of that high school for one year. For four years he held a principalship in Kansas.

Mr. C. M. Hackley, the shop teacher, took a two year teacher's vocational course in mechanics at the University of California. He taught mechanics in Chico high one year, this being his second year of teaching. At the present time Mr. Hackley is very busy trying to get the shop in good order.

Mr. Edwards, the new football coach, comes from Eureka. He has led two football teams to the championship of their division. The first was at Tamalpais Military Academy and the last at Eureka.

EXONERATE AUTO DRIVER IN DEATH OF AGED MAN

Henry Rulfs, of San Francisco has been exonerated of blame in the death of Henry O. Tiffany, of San Mateo, who was fatally injured when hit by a machine driven by Rulfs on the state highway at Baden crossing.

Tiffany died at the Community hospital in Beresford. The inquest was held in Redwood City, and was conducted by Coroner W. A. Brooke.

The decision reached was that Tiffany was intoxicated at the time of the accident, as five bottles of liquor were found in the injured man's possession when he was taken to the hospital following the accident.

We may not be able to imitate Lindbergh's flying feat, but we might emulate his example in making short speeches.

As many as 550,000 telephone conversations take place a day in the city of Portland, Oregon.

Perhaps President Coolidge chose the Black Hills to get as far as possible from the Black Bottom.

AN OLD-TIME CONQUEROR

Nine hundred years ago, in 1027, (some say 1028) there was born in France a child who was destined to play an important part in the world's history.

He was the son of Robert, duke of Normandy, and Herleva Fulbert, daughter of a tanner of Falaise. He is known to history as William the Conqueror, and was the leader of that epochal struggle known as the Norman Conquest, which made him master of England.

Claiming succession to the English throne by virtue of a former compact with Harold, earl of Wessex, William invaded England when Harold himself accepted the English crown. At the famed battle of Hastings, October 14, 1066, William was victorious through a brilliant strategy and Harold was killed. Within five years William had conquered all England, and although numerous insurrections against his authority afterward occurred, he maintained his mastery with a firm hand as William I.

Both before and after the conquest of England William had to fight many battles to hold his original territory in Normandy, being pitted at times against his own son, Robert.

In 1087, while at war with the French, he invaded the district of Vexen and burned the town of Mantes. His horse, plunging into the burning cinders, inflicted wounds from which William the Conqueror died on September 9, 1087.

William was stern, self-reliant and unscrupulous, but less cruel than many other warriors of his time, although he did wreak terrible vengeance upon a French district whose inhabitants had taunted him with his birth.

His nine hundredth anniversary is being celebrated this year with elaborate ceremonies, both in England and in parts of France.

ALL WET

The Far West has an occasional severe earthquake. Proper safeguards in building construction reduce earthquake damage to negligible proportions. At intervals the Far West is visited by periods of drouth. These visitations need not inflict much injury; water storage and careful forehand planning will render them almost harmless. Cyclonic windstorms and extensive floods are practically unknown in the Far West.

When California speaks of the flood danger to its Imperial Valley through an overflow of the Colorado, it does not mean a widespread temporary inundation of the kind that covered the lower Mississippi Valley this spring. If the Colorado River breaks through the levees, it means that the entire flow of the yellow river will head north instead of south, will run through the Imperial Valley into the Salton Sea 220 feet below the sea level. This salt lake, receiving the full volume of water coming from the Colorado's huge watershed continuously, will rise gradually but inexorably until its waters have covered the entire below-sea-level territory. And the Imperial Valley with its 54,000 inhabitants lies below sea level.

The area flooded by the Mississippi is dry again in a few weeks. If the Colorado breaks loose, it means the eventual permanent submersion of half a million rich agricultural acres and of a dozen flourishing towns. That's why it is important, vitally important, that the work of controlling the Colorado be started at the earliest possible moment.—September "Sunset."

BOYS, AND GIRLS' CLUBS

No movement having for its object the betterment of rural life is worthy of more encouragement and support than that of forming and maintaining boys' and girls' clubs.

It is gratifying to observe that the movement is spreading rapidly, and that more than half a million young people on the farms of the country are enrolled in clubs sponsored by the Federal government alone.

In a recent review by the Department of Agriculture it was shown that civic bodies, fair committees, bankers and individual business men in many states are taking notice of the club movement, and are fostering it through the offering of prizes, scholarships, trips and other rewards for efficiency shown by farm boys and girls in carrying out the various projects included in the club program.

Club activities not only serve to prepare young people for their life work, if they choose to stay on the farm, but the conducting of their own meetings develops qualities of leadership and confidence in themselves. Even those who enter other pursuits are better fitted for their future careers by the discipline and training which are inseparable from club membership.

Every rural community should cooperate with home demonstration agents and other extension workers in promoting boys' and girls' clubs. It is a splendid enterprise, which will have a most beneficial effect upon farm life in the future.

BARKING DOGS

Listen! Hear 'em? Those are the Dogs of War, barking 'way off in the distance, straining at the leash. If we are to believe the prophets, including Lloyd George, they'll be at one another's throats shortly because a war between England and Russia is inevitable.

If England and Russia go to war in the next five years, we will agree to pay the entire Russian pre-war national debt out of our own pocket. This war talk is bunk, mates. Not one of the great powers dares give a serious thought to war-making. It costs too much. It might even cost the lives of the war-makers. England is too poor for a real fight, and Russia has nothing to fight with except millions of unarmed and unequipped men. England hasn't the money nor the munitions for a first-class war. Both sides know it. That's why they carry their bluffs much farther than they would have dared fifteen years ago.

The GREEN CLOAK

By YORKE DAVIS

WNU Service.
Copyright, 1926

STORY FROM THE START

Dr. Ronald McAllister, psychologist, undertakes to solve the mystery of the murder of a reclusive, Henry Morgan. The dead man's papers reveal that he had been in New Zealand, where McAllister had lived in his youth. Will Harvey testifies to seeing a woman in a green cloak at the Morgan home the night of the murder. Doctor McAllister is asked to see a young woman patient in a hospital. In her delirium she mutters in a strange language which only McAllister understands. He suspects she may know something of the murder. A carefully hidden map is discovered by McAllister and Assistant District Attorney Ashton in Morgan's home. While they are searching a young woman enters the house in the darkness and escapes, leaving behind a green cloak. The name of Jane Perkins, a housemaid, is brought into the case and McAllister believes he has a clue.

CHAPTER VI

After our conversation with Ashton the morning, which had terminated with a practical declaration of war, on our part, upon him, his visit to our laboratory took us rather by surprise. I think, perhaps that he intended it that way, and that there may have been lurking in the bottom of his mind the idea that by coming upon us in that unexpected way, he might surprise some secret we were holding back from him.

"Well," he said cheerfully in answer to our greeting, "I just met Harvey coming away from here in Malloy's conveyance. I suppose with such an array of instruments as this," he waved his hand to include pretty much everything in the room, "you've succeeded in getting the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth out of him. How about it? Is he innocent or guilty?"

His mockery was perfectly good-natured, but the depth of his skepticism made it possible for Doctor McAllister to be perfectly frank with him. "He is innocent," said he. "He had no more connection with the Oak Ridge murder than you had."

"He says so himself, I presume," observed Ashton.

"Exactly," replied the doctor. The telephone bell rang just then and I answered it. I heard a voice from somewhere inquiring if this was Doctor McAllister's laboratory, and on my answering in the affirmative, the voice asked if Mr. Ashton had arrived yet.

"He's here now," I said. "Do you want to talk with him?"

Then I turned away and called Ashton to the phone. As he started across the room my chief spoke to him.

"I see an evening paper sticking out of your pocket," said he. "Let me have a look, will you, while you are at the telephone?"

Ashton handed it to him, then crossed the room and picked up the receiver.

The doctor beckoned to me. For the moment he seemed very little concerned with the news, for he turned the front pages rapidly, until he came to the lost and found section in the classified advertising. Once there, his eye pounced, like a hawk, upon the item he wanted. His long bony finger pointed it out to me:

"Found—A green cloak. Owner can have same by identifying and paying cost of this insertion."

"I wonder if that bait has brought any nibbles this afternoon," the doctor whispered.

Then, before I could reply, he gripped my arm tightly, and nodded toward Ashton.

"A woman, you say?" . . . I heard him exclaim with every appearance of excitement.

"Did she identify it?" . . .

"What sort of woman? Anything unusual about her?"

There was a little silence while he listened for the description. Then in an incredulous tone we heard him exclaim:

"An English housemaid! And she gave her name as Jane Perkins! Did she identify the cloak beyond a doubt?"

"What address did she give?"

"What's that? Three—seven—0 Woodland! Why, you idiot, that's my own address! That's The Meredith. And you let her walk off with that cloak over her arm after she had given you that address!"

He waited for no answer, replaced the receiver on the hook, with a jerk, and whirled around upon us, his face red with anger.

"Gentlemen, don't you think you have carried this joke a little too far?" he demanded.

I suppose the unwarranted accusation might have made me angry if I had had leisure to indulge in such an emotion. But all my other feelings were swallowed up in astonishment.

That one additional detail supplied by Ashton's conversation over the telephone stretched an already hardly credible coincidence to the breaking point. Jane Perkins not only had a green cloak with a high collar, but she had lost it; and seeing it advertised as found, had promptly gone and identified it, and had gone away with it over her arm. But the address—well, I admitted to myself, that reduced the whole thing to a farce.

For a moment all my belief in Doctor McAllister's theory, in the validity of the test we had performed upon Harvey, in every scientific law I had felt surest of ten minutes ago, tottered on its foundation. Some one, somewhere, in placid security from our suspicions, and from the possibility of our detection was directing this ghastly farce and was permitting himself to laugh at us. That girl in the hospital had been shamming; Harvey had been shamming; Jane Perkins, who had identified the cloak, was, perhaps, a myth altogether. I could imagine whoever played the part laughing, as she walked away with that cloak over her arm, and picturing the effect upon all of us when we should learn the address she had given.

But to the district attorney the situation had a very different look. He had no doubt at all—and on second thought I could not blame him—that we ourselves were the center of a plot to make him look ridiculous.

I got the shock of another surprise when I turned to look at Doctor McAllister. Instead of the indignant rebuke which I expected him to mete out to the young man who had just accused him, he spoke very quietly and with a mocking twinkle in his eye.

"You can't expect me to pass my opinion on a joke, Ashton, until I hear it," he said.

"You know altogether too much about it already," said the attorney hotly. "This precious Jane Perkins of yours answers my advertisement for the cloak which you turned over to me. She identifies it, beyond any doubt, as anyone whom you had instructed in advance would be able to do—identifies it down to a missing button and a patch in the lining. How far back does the joke go? Did you find the cloak as you pretended you did, in Oak Ridge, near the Morgan house, or was the finding of it part of the game?"

A little gesture of rebuke and protest from the doctor checked him very abruptly.

"No, I withdraw that," he said. "That was an unwarranted thing to say. I believe that up to this morning, when you declared war upon me, you thought that by instructing the woman to give my own detective my own address as hers you were giving me a fair chance to detect the fraud. It would be, I suppose, if this were a game of chess. But this is serious business."

"We realize that as well as you do," I started to say, but my chief interrupted me.

"Can't you penetrate our fraud a little further?" he asked, and his tone now was openly derisive. "Does it occur to you that Phelps here, with the addition of a skirt and a shawl, might not be a sufficiently plausible Jane Perkins, to deceive the astute gentleman you left in charge?"

There was a little pause there, for Ashton was too angry to answer.

The doctor's manner changed as he went on. "What Phelps says is true. We realize better than you do, I think, what is at stake here. We're not trying to thwart justice in the long run. We are attacking this problem in our own way, after giving you fair warning. We refused to conflict with yours, and we told you, in so many words, that you'd do well to keep an eye on us. You've the law on your side. You've all the power of the state attorney's office, whereas we have no standing at all. If you think we've got the cloak, search us; search the laboratory. Where will you begin?"

Still too angry to make any reply, Ashton strode out of the room, not actually slamming the door after him, but shutting it decisively enough to suggest that he felt like slamming it, and the next moment we heard his motor chugging away down the avenue.

The doctor hurried to the window and looked out after him. Presently he turned toward me with a long breath of relief.

"We're all right so far," he said.

"He's gone straight on without turning the corner. He isn't going back to The Meredith just yet. Come along. We'll have no time to lose even as it is. Ashton will have cooled down by dinner time, and when he's cool enough to let his mind begin working again, he'll become dangerous."

Already he was struggling into his overcoat. I turned to go to the other room for mine, when he called me back and sent me to the telephone.

"I think we had better have a taxi," he said. "It'll save some precious time and will enable us to take some of our traps up to the hotel with us."

"Traps?" I inquired. "Some of our instruments, do you mean?"

He nodded. "The chronograph and telephones," he said. "I fancy they'll be all we'll need for any real test we shall want to make, but it will be well to take something else for the purpose of diffusing attention. Here, this piece of heavy artillery will just serve the purpose. It's rather cumbersome, but that makes it all the better."

The instrument he indicated was one I had never seen before, it having come in only that day from the model makers. The doctor was always devising new instruments of one sort or another. This one looked interesting, and I should have questioned him about it had not my mind been so full of other things.

"You'd better telephone at once," he concluded. "If this sleet storm keeps up, the wires are likely to be down before night."

Both of us, I think, would have been a little surprised if we could have known how true that prediction was and how vitally it was going to concern us.

"You are going to make some tests up in our rooms in The Meredith?" I asked.

"I imagine," he said soberly, though his eyes sparkled with excitement as he spoke, "I imagine that our rooms will be about the only place where we will be secure from interruption. I could see it in Ashton's eye that he meant business, and I'm pretty sure that if we attempted to come back here after dinner and bring anybody with us, our little party would sustain a rude interruption."

All the while he spoke, he was busy gathering things together, and as soon as I had finished telephoning, I helped him. Haste spoke in every movement he made, and it was not long before I was thoroughly infected with his excitement, although I had only a vague idea what it was all about.

Not until we were seated in the cab, with a suitcase full of instruments at our feet, did he say anything that tended to clear up any part of the mystery.

"It was a great piece of luck," he observed then, "we were able to send Ashton away in such a rage. It won't occur to him for some time, to begin making inquiries about The Meredith."

"You mean," I exclaimed, "that the address four—seven—0 Woodland avenue was given in good faith, by a real Jane Perkins, who is actually employed there?"

He only laughed and told me to wait and see; but the infection of his voice and the eager expectancy in his eyes made it clear that that was what he did believe.

"But," I protested, "even if it were possible to imagine Jane Perkins as having any possible connection with the crime, it is inconceivable that she would go and risk answering the advertisement in order to reclaim the cloak and then give her own address."

He vouchsafed no word of explanation or argument, but I could see that my objection had not shaken him in the least. So, perforce, I waited with what patience I could assume to see what would happen when we reached The Meredith.

The doctor turned over our bag to a hallboy, with instructions that it be taken to our apartment. Then he led the way straight toward the dining room. It was barely six o'clock, a full hour earlier than we usually dined, and the room was almost empty.

"It won't entirely destroy your appetite to sit down to dinner in tweeds, will it?" he asked. "We really haven't time for frivolities of that sort this evening."

Broken Heart Cause of Pyorrhea Attacks

According to Dr. Hans Sachs of Berlin, one of Germany's most eminent dentists, the jolts of life and worries loosen teeth and are the real cause of pyorrhea. Keep your soul in snug comfort and harmony, he says, and your teeth will be free of the modern plague of pyorrhea. Doctor Sachs has devoted the last ten years to the study of the influence of psychological factors on teeth, says the Pathfinder Magazine. He believes that pyorrhea develops most easily in teeth affected by tartar.

"I have established through a series of tests that under strain of emotion and worries tartar settles on teeth much more rapidly than under normal condition," he claims. "Another cause for pyorrhea is gnashing of teeth, especially when asleep. Psychoanalysts know that gnashing of the teeth is only a reaction of the subconscious mind trying to free itself of burdensome impressions of daily life. Consequently, here, too, is a psychic cause leading to pyorrhea. Most pyorrhea patients belong to the depressive type discovered by Freud. Take the depression away and the pyorrhea will improve. It may sound foolish to laymen, but there is no doubt that a broken heart may cause pyorrhea and the subsequent loss of teeth."

Origin of "Horse-Radish"

In the names of plants and fruits the word "horse" is frequently used to denote a large, strong or coarse variety. For instance horse beans are a coarse variety of common beans used in feeding horses and cattle. It is supposed that the word was originally used in "horse-radish" for the same purpose; namely, to indicate what was regarded as a coarse kind of radish.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

The cities of the Pacific Coast had the lowest infant mortality rates in the nation during the last year and San Francisco was ranked third in the country in statistics of the American Child Health Association made public last week by the State Board of Health. Among the largest cities of the United States, including those having populations of more than 250,000, the lowest rate was 39 per thousand in Portland, Ore. Seattle was second with 47 and San Francisco third with 50.

In the not so distant future, it will be possible to mail a letter in the morning from San Francisco to Los Angeles, and get an answer by mail late the same afternoon. Vern C. Gorst, president of Pacific Air Transport, which operates mail and passenger lines between Seattle and Los Angeles, is responsible for the prediction. According to Gorst, it will only be a short time until the volume of air mail increases to a point where round-trip daylight air mail service will be necessary. The Los Angeles-Seattle route was third in tonnage carried of the twelve air routes of the nation for May, June and July, according to figures made public in Washington.

Three firemen were injured and a $400,000 loss was caused by fire which last week gutted the new State Theater at Sacramento. Efforts of the entire Sacramento fire department were required to keep the flames from wiping out an entire block, including two garages in which were more than 400 automobiles.

The annual convention of the California State Builders' Exchange will be held at Santa Cruz Saturday, Sunday and Monday, September 3, 4 and 5, and Charles W. Gompertz, president of the State organization, says that over 500 delegates from all parts of the state will attend. Matters of great importance to the building industry will be discussed and addresses will be made by leading architects, engineers and building material men.

Delegates and guests from all parts of the state who attend the eighth annual convention of the California State Builders' Exchange at Santa Cruz, September 3 to 5 inclusive, will be officially welcomed by the Mayor of Santa Cruz and will be entertained by a special committee named by the chamber of commerce.

State school authorities announced last week that they would immediately ask the department of finance for an emergency appropriation to provide temporary buildings for the fall classes at the Chico State Teachers' College, to replace the main administration building destroyed last week by fire. These temporary buildings, it was indicated would be used until the next session of the legislature could make an appropriation for the erection of permanent structures. The fall classes at the college will open within a month.

The left leg of Ernest Giles, a Bails Ferry farmer, was broken last week when he fell from his seat on a disc harrow, crushing his leg beneath one of the wheels. Giles laughs about the accident for his left leg was made of wood. His right leg was not hurt a particle. His brother, a carpenter, is repairing the broken wooden leg.

Fire that swept everything before it despite the efforts of firemen destroyed the State Teachers' College in Chico, last week, causing a loss estimated at $500,000. The original site of ten acres on which the school is located was given for the purpose by the late General John Bidwell. It was the third normal school established in the state. The library containing some unreplaceable books was destroyed and alone was valued at $50,000.

Orange county is preparing to celebrate this year's golden harvest of orchard, field and hive. On September 5, there will open near Santa Ana a festival of six days' duration, the Orange County Fair, at which $2,000 in cash prizes, valuable cups and other awards will be given for the finest entries in agricultural divisions.

Is there a meaner thief than the man who steals pennies from a child's bank? San Francisco police last week heard the story of Carl Bush, blind accordion player, and then answered the question with a loud and indignant "yes," for Bush's accordeon, his sole means of support, was stolen from him.

All nurses employed by the city of San Francisco who served in the World War will be entitled to a sixty-day vacation with pay in order to attend the American Legion convention in Paris under a resolution adopted by the Board of Supervisors. The new resolution supplements a similar one adopted a month ago granting the privilege to male employees of the city.

The traffic count taken in July by the State Highway Commission for the first time showed the peninsula highway, south of San Francisco, to be the most heavily traveled in the state, according to the figures given out by the commission. The count was made on July 17 near the junction with the Bay Shore highway. The cars passing this point for the sixteen hours of the count numbered 29,338. Indiana street, Los Angeles, was second with 22,385 cars and the San Jose highway, just south of the city limits of Hayward, third with 17,206 machines.

Improvements in the shape of a spur track one-half mile in length and a new heating plant to cost $40,000 will shortly be added to the University of California Davis Farm. The spur track is now under construction, and bids on the heating plant have just been asked. Four boilers of approximately 110 horsepower capacity each will be installed.

Stirred by reports that coyote pelts from the surrounding counties are being smuggled into Glenn with the end in view of getting the $10 bounty paid at Willows, the board of supervisors named inspectors in every district, whose approval must be secured before any pelt claim is paid.

After burning over 60,000 acres of grass lands on an estimated fifteen-mile front, the fire, which has been raging in the coast range near Coalinga, is now under control.

Green dahlias of the pompon variety will be a novel feature of the display at the annual show of the Dahlia Society of San Francisco to be held as usual at the Palace Hotel, on September 1, 2 and 3, afternoon and evening. The strange blooms are the product of the garden of Mrs. Ellie Miller at 124 Ralston street, and seem to be a distinct step toward the mystic blue dahlia, the aim of all dahlia growers, and until now sought through the lavender tint.

A gold strike surpassing any in the northern Sierra district in years is being claimed at Nevada City, according to a special dispatch received in Sacramento last week. The ore is described as high grade, and defying efforts of well informed amateurs to estimate the value, although the minimum is set at $5,000 a ton. The ore was taken from the Old Brush Creek mine, operated by the Kate Hardy Company, which recently unwaters the property.

The Carnegie Foundation of New York, at the suggestion of President Calvin Coolidge has just selected Professor David P. Barrows of the University of California department of political science as the best man available in the United States to represent this country in a six-months good-will tour of Latin-America next spring. Professor Barrows, who was formerly president of the University has been granted a leave of absence from January to June, 1928, by the Board of Regents.

The deed of sale making the Oakland Airport site the property of the City of Oakland was filed last week by George Geggard, port manager. The 680 acres of property was transferred to the city by Frank L. Taylor and his wife, Mildred, and G. C. Stephens and his wife, Louise.

California is growing industrially! This salient fact was revealed in a compilation of census data showing the industrial development of the state, which has just been completed by the California Development Association. The survey showed that California ranks eighth among the ten leading states in the total value of manufactured products. During 1925 the Golden State produced manufactured commodities valued at $2,442,952,104.

California replaced Pennsylvania and Michigan and ranked third next to New York and Texas, in order of value of exports for the first three months of 1927, with exports of merchandise valued at $81,244,751 for the period as compared with $63,652,164 for the three-month period of 1926, an increase of $17,592,587. These figures have just been announced by the United States Department of Commerce in Washington.

Builders of skyscrapers, bridges, homes and all interests allied in the building industry of the state will hold their eighth annual convention at Santa Cruz September 3 to 5. The sessions will bring together delegates and representatives of every builders' exchange in California in what is expected to be the largest gathering of the building interests of the state ever held.

The Palo Alto horse show, which netted $1,500 for the Stanford Home for Convalescent Children, will be an annual event on the Stanford campus. A. P. Fleming, manager of the Northern California Horse Show Association, declared. Fleming has gone to Stockton to arrange for a show there August 28. More than $8,000 in stakes have already been promised for next year's show at Palo Alto, Fleming said.

Fresno and Visalia will both have representatives before the State Railroad Commission next month in separate moves to take over private water systems and operate them as municipal utilities. Hearings will begin September 1 in the case of Fresno, which proposes to acquire the Fresno City Water Corporation, now owned by the California Water Service Company. Visalia's condemnation proceedings, in which it is proposed to take over the Visalia Water Company, will start later in the month. P. E. Dufour, valuation engineer of the commission, will preside at both evaluation proceedings.

California's new law designed to speed up selection of juries in criminal cases was given its first test in the choice of a jury in five minutes in Sacramento last week and resulted in the case of John Valdez, accused of assault with intent to commit murder. Instead of submitting to lengthy questioning by state and defense attorneys, as in the past, the prospective jurors were briefly examined by Superior Judge J. R. Hughes, under the new statute urged through the recent Legislature by the state commission for revision of criminal procedure.

Wolves Threaten Industry

Patagonia, which is one of the great centers of sheep breeding, is in terrible trouble because of packs of dog-wolves which are destroying sheep by the thousand. These creatures are crosses between the native wolf and collies that have run wild. They have little fear of man and, indeed, have killed many shepherds. They are doing such terrible damage that the export of wool and mutton from Patagonia is rapidly decreasing.

NIAGARA PEACE BRIDGE

Renewed pledges of British and American friendship by dignitaries of both nations marked the formal opening of the great peace bridge across the Niagara, between the United States and Canada, a short time ago.

Dedicated to more than one hundred years of unbroken peace, it stands as a monument to the mutual respect and co-operation which marks the relations between the two great English-speaking powers.

Taking part in the dedication ceremonies were the Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, and Premier Baldwin, representing the British commonwealth; Vice-President Dawes and Secretary of State Kellogg, representing the United States; the prime ministers of Canada and Ontario, Governor Smith of New York, and other high officials.

All of the speeches emphasized the idea that a future war between Great Britain and America is unthinkable, despite minor differences which may arise, such as developed at the Geneva naval conference just closed.

It is well that responsible statesmen, as well as the public of both countries, take this view. War between these two great nations would virtually destroy all that has been gained through Western civilization in centuries.

On the other hand, so long as the Lion and the Eagle remain at peace, hope may be entertained for the ultimate realization of peace and order throughout the world.

MAINTENANCE OF PARKS

The city of Pasadena has the highest per capita cost of maintenance of parks of the six selected cities studied by the research department of the California Taxpayers' Association. The study was for the fiscal year 1925-1926. Pasadena showed a per capita maintenance cost of $3.65, Sacramento $2, Stockton $1.66, Fresno $1.27, Berkeley $1.07 and Glendale 48 cents.

Berkeley showed a higher maintenance cost per park than any other city studied. Berkeley's cost was $795 per park acre, Fresno $501.16, Stockton $404.75, Pasadena $213.02, Sacramento $172.17, and Glendale $46.87.

Berkeley also showed the highest population per park acre. Berkeley had 740.74 persons per park acre, Fresno 395.6, Stockton 244.44, Glendale 97.88, Sacramento 86.08, and Pasadena 58.33.

More than forty thousand telephones constitute the service of communication behind the extensive system of forest protection in the state of California alone.

MANAGERS AND WORKERS

No one who has observed the changing attitude of workmen and employers toward each other during recent years can fail to be impressed with the better relations which have been brought about, with beneficial results to all concerned.

In the old days, employer and employee looked upon each other with distrust, firmly believing that anything which the one desired was necessarily against the interests of the other. Now they are coming to understand that their interests are mutual, and that generally speaking what is good for one is also good for the other.

As a result we see intelligent managers seeking to promote the welfare of their employees, through good wages, comfortable and sanitary working conditions and reasonable hours of labor. Workmen are showing a better spirit of loyalty, greater productivity, and a regard for the employer's interests. This is not universally the case, but the trend is in this direction.

The overburdened and dissatisfied employee is not efficient, and managers have learned that fact. Not through altruism alone, but because it is good business, employers are showing more regard for their employees, and are reaping the rewards of an enlightened policy, through securing more effective and loyal service.

ONE PERSON'S CARELESSNESS

All the statistics in the world are not half so convincing as one poignant example of what may be caused by the slightest carelessness in the matter of fire. A recently published statement showing the annual loss by matches and smoking to be over fifty millions of dollars, while tremendous and terrible, is likely passed over by the average reader with slight interest.

In Crater Lake National Park, however, there is an example that once seen is a life lesson. At a high point on one of the many scenic drives, a pinnacle from which hundreds of miles of surrounding country can be seen, is a sign reading, "The product of one person's carelessness with fire." And stretching away behind the sign is a vast mountain side populated only by blackened stumps, all that is left of what was once a magnificent virgin forest, until a match or cigarette butt was dropped and left unobserved.

It would be a good thing if every inhabitant of this country could stand at that point and see the desolation the raging flames have wrought. We should have no more such signs or reasons for them.

FAMED "LOOP" ABANDONED

For a number of years the famous "Georgetown Loop" on the Colorado and Southern Railroad, near Denver, has given passengers a thrill while passing over it.

In order to reach the sharp ascent of a canyon, the track was built in the form of a spiral, whereby it circled and looped itself, one circle of the loop passing over the other. At the time it was built, it was considered one of the notable railroad engineering projects of the day. It was known and crossed over by thousands of travelers, while pictures of the structure were seen in many school text books.

But the automobiles and busses, with improved mountain roads in that section, so curtailed its traffic as to make this branch of the railroad unprofitable to operate, and the Colorado Public Service Commission has permitted its abandonment.

Thus passes from useful service one of the most picturesque bits of railroad construction in the United States. It fulfilled its purpose well in its day, but, like many other cunning works of man, it must now give way to more modern methods and devices.

A Britisher wants a course in laughter introduced in the schools. We used to see results gotten in this line with no more equipment than a bent pin.

WORKERS OPPOSE RADICALS

"Who, in this country, are most effectively leading the movement against communists and radicals?" was a question asked by David F. Houston, formerly Secretary of the Treasury under President Wilson, in an address a few days ago. "Not the government, not professional and industrial leaders, but the leaders of the workmen themselves. And so it is that when the people rule they can be depended upon to take care of those who instill poison into the public mind."

"Why is it that here, where the people rule, labor is, in the main, contented, has higher wages, and higher standards of living than can be found anywhere else in the world, while in Europe labor tends more to be mutinous and radical? I do not wonder that in many sections of Europe labor is mutinous and radical. I can easily imagine myself being an extreme radical in some parts of Europe and a rank conservative here. The things confronting the average man in Europe never existed here."

"Few leaders in eastern and southern Europe have developed to the point where they can formulate programs which would be in measurable distance of those which have long been incorporated in our life and have become commonplaces. And yet, there are among us persons of alien origin, unaware of differences, unaware of the spirit and meaning of America, who would presume to tell us what to do. They can advise us to revolutionize our institutions. These people do not talk our language. They have no message for the people of this nation."

ELECTRICAL ECONOMY

Mrs. F. D. Quinlisk, of Wichita, Kansas, is a practical and economical housewife, who believes in modern conveniences in the home. When her husband expressed skepticism regarding the advisability of installing electrical equipment in their new bungalow, she got together some facts and figures which convinced him, according to a story in the Evening Eagle.

She found, among other things, that such small household equipment as a fan, vacuum cleaner, sewing machine, dishwasher, and heating pad could be operated by electricity at a cost of considerably less than one cent an hour for each, also that current for a toaster, percolator or iron cost less than three cents an hour.

As a result of her investigation, her husband had the desired conveniences installed without further argument. Another fact which they discovered is that electricity is the only commodity of general use which is actually sold today at a less price than before the war, a fact which in a large measure accounts for the phenomenal increase in the use of electricity which has been brought about during the last few years.

Nor has this increased use been confined entirely to cities and towns. Through the co-operation of agricultural colleges, farm organizations and electric companies, great progress has been made in extending the use of electricity to farmers of many states. While this movement is yet in its infancy, the success attained so far gives promise that farmers generally will within a few years share in the benefits of this electrical equipment, which has done so much to lighten the labors of mankind.

NO COMPULSORY STUFF

The compulsory business in selling anything seems to be in bad order with the highest court. It is not allowed to "go" even in the movie business. The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that a film producer cannot enforce a contract requiring his customers to take all or none of his productions, the good and bad, the suitable and unsuitable, successful and unsuccessful alike. It is a compulsory sale under duress and not enforceable.

The ruling seems to fit the compulsory automobile insurance law very nicely. It seems just as fair to sell a poor picture with a good one as to sell a liability insurance policy with an automobile, both or none. The only difference is that if the State adopts compulsory insurance as a "police" measure it might be able to sell the policy with the license by monopolizing for itself the insurance with the licensing power. It could not require a private company to assume an undesired risk, and it is doubtful whether it can make the issuance of a license depend upon the consent of an insurance company or insurance companies.

In workmen's compensation insurance the employer has his option of insurance or no insurance. He can elect and take his chances. In compulsory automobile insurance the owner has no option, although his position toward the public is exactly that of an employer toward his workmen.

There is a principle of law imbedded in the new decision that may well be looked into by legal talent.—Insurance Field.

Chicago gossips will no longer be permitted to hold forth on the sidewalks to the obstruction of traffic. This prohibition should aid the club movement.

A church at DeKalb, Ill., refused to let Senator Tom Heflin speak within its walls, probably because there was no tornado insurance on the structure.

A 100-FOOT SKELETON

After being buried for ages in the fossil beds of northeastern Utah, the largest skeleton ever discovered on land now stands in the Carnegie Museum at Pittsburgh, a striking example of the monsters which roamed the earth during the Age of Reptiles, many millions of years ago.

This skeleton is that of a Brontosaurus, of the dinosaur order of reptiles, 100 feet long and 20 feet high. In life the animal weighed twenty tons. Alongside of it an elephant would seem as small relatively as a dog beside a horse.

The fossil bed from which it was taken is the most extensive deposit of dinosaurian and other reptilian remains ever discovered. It was found in 1919, and the site is under the protection of the National Park Service. More than 200 tons of bones and other material of scientific value have been removed for study and exhibition, with very little duplication of specimens.

According to a recent statement by the Park Service, it is the belief of scientists that these prehistoric animals were originally imbedded in a sand bar in some ancient river. This sand turned to sandstone and was covered by thousands of feet of other strata of rocks, the whole later having been forced into an upright position by a great volcanic upheaval, which left the fossil bed exposed on a mountain top.

Through the patient labors of scientists who are continually exploring among such records preserved in the rocks, as well as among the ruins of ancient civilization, salient facts in the world's history which were totally unknown a few years ago are being brought to light.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS

To one of humane tendencies it is distressing to witness the utter disregard of animal suffering which is shown by thoughtless or vicious persons.

Acts of unnecessary cruelty to dumb animals are an indication of either a lack of education or a serious moral defect on the part of those who practice them. Children should be taught very early to treat animals with kindness. Without such teaching a child is very likely to develop cruel tendencies, particularly when the example of unfeeling indifference is set by older persons.

As a prominent educator recently said, any system of education which neglects training in the humane treatment of animals is failing in its duty.

We have noticed another thing: Any person who is cruel to animals will bear watching in all his other relations of life.

Chicago has an average of 800,000 telephone calls a day.

Colma News Notes

Joe Millett, Jr., of Colma, left this week for a trip to Grand Canyon, Colorado.

Mrs. A. Wright, of Colma, was given a birthday party Thursday by a number of friends.

Mrs. Heitman, nee Anita Witt, of Colma, gave an informal afternoon tea to a number of her Colma friends at her home in San Francisco.

Henry Suendermann and Irene Millett, of Colma, of the class of 1927, Jefferson Union high school, have registered at San Mateo Junior College for the fall semester.

On Wednesday night the Cypress Circle of the United Ancient Order of Druids entertained the Grand Arch-Druidess Mamie Barretta with a reception and drill. The visit is an annual affair. The meeting was held in the Colma Community Center.

Keep your eye on the Daly City Record for the date of the big October whist party by the Girls' Club of Colma. Big plans are being made and an enjoyable time can be looked forward to, as the girls are noted for their royal entertainment.

In September the Girls' Club of Colma will resume their work at their rooms in Mrs. Henderson's home, on Dunk street, after a very pleasant vacation of two months. Their first meeting will open with a supper for which the committee is making extensive plans. In addition to the business meeting, an excellent program is being planned.

The Holy Angels' church will hold a whist party on Thursday, September 15, at the Holy Angels' hall, to raise funds to put a new roof on the church. The ladies of the parish, headed by Mrs. M. Grady, are in charge of the affair, and are doing everything in their power to make it a social and financial success, and with the work of these ladies there is no doubt that all who attend will receive more than their money's worth, besides aiding a worthy cause.

On Wednesday evening, August 24, the Girls' Club of Colma honored their past president, Mrs. James Packwood, nee Estelle Atkinson, with a sumptuous bridal repast at the home of Mrs. James Henderson on Dunk street. After all the girls gathered, the new bride ushered them into the spacious dining room, which was artistically decorated for the occasion with pink dahlias, interwoven with maiden and asparagus ferns, a sight which will long be remembered by all present. As all were seated about the table, Mrs. Packwood was presented with a gift, which she accepted with thanks and appreciation. After the spread, all gathered in the front room, where flash-light pictures were taken by a number of the girls who are interested in such work. Piano and vocal selections were rendered by several, and a very happy time was had by the following: Mrs. James Henderson, Mrs. A. M. Sheldon, of San Francisco; Mrs. James Packwood, of Burlingame; Mrs. James Grandona, Mrs. A. Shingazy, the Misses Fabian Ver Linden, Elsie Wilke, Alice Thiel, Anna Kennedy, Violet Ver Linden, Emily Wilke, Estelle Torello, of Hillsborough, and Sylvia Anderson, of Burlingame. Mrs. Packwood has resumed her duties as teacher at the Crocker-Amazon school. Her numerous friends, relatives and acquaintances wish the young couple much happiness and a prosperous future.

There will be two high class pictures presented at the State Theatre next Sunday, August 28, when the patrons of this popular local movie house may see Jackie Coogan in one of his greatest successes, "Johnnie Get Your Hair Cut," and Edmund Lowe in "Black Paradise."

PASSING OF BELOVED MAN

John Biggio, Sr., familiarly known as "Papa John," a resident of Colma for forty years, died Sunday August 21, 1927. He was the father of Enrico Biggio, and had both grandchildren and great-grandchildren. He was really a good-natured, dignified character of the North End. There was nothing else he enjoyed so much as to play his accordion for a gathering of his friends. He would do this for many hours without a word of complaint. He never tired in making others happy. He was religious, too. He was at church nearly every Sunday. In church he had the distinction and honor of going around with the collection box. He never noticed what was put in, but appeared as though he appreciated every offering, both large and small.

Among his associates he had the reputation of never failing to keep his word. All of them looked up to him and had faith in him.

The funeral took place on Wednesday and was largely attended. A requiem mass was celebrated for the repose of his soul at Holy Angels' church, Colma. He was laid to rest in the Italian cemetery.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH

James Ferguson, principal of the Jefferson Union high school, requests that all adults who desire to attend evening classes come to the high school next Tuesday at 7 o'clock.

The new principal is greatly pleased with the fine spirit of co-operation found among the students of the high school. At a student body meeting held on Wednesday of this week, he congratulated the students on their fine spirit and thanked them for their hearty co-operation.

Mr. Ferguson went into details regarding plans of the board of education regarding the future development of the school. He predicts that Jefferson high school will have an equipment for athletics, as well as for the scholastic departments of the school, that will make it rank among the best in California. He complimented the students upon the record which they have already attained and upon the fine spirit of co-operation between the board of education and the community.

WEBB WILL SEEK BRIDGE PERMIT

Renewal of the bridge controversy is seen in the notice given by Colonel Frank Elbridge Webb of his intention to appear before the San Mateo county supervisors at Redwood City on Monday, October 2, and apply for a franchise to construct a bridge at Candlestick Point. Webb's formal notice of intention to apply for the franchise has been published in the San Mateo Daily Times and has also been filed in the office of County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese. A similar application, filed by R. W. Thompson, of New York, is now before the supervisors for consideration, having twice been postponed.

"I feel that if the supervisors of San Mateo county are going to grant a franchise for the construction of a bridge at Candlestick Point, which is the logical place for such a structure, that I deserve consideration," Colonel Webb is quoted as saying.

"The idea to build a bridge across San Francisco bay originated with me and I have devoted my entire time to such a project for the past four years. I am in a position to finance the Candlestick Point bridge, and the great amount of data that I have compiled in my four years' work, as well as the data compiled and gathered by engineers employed by me, will permit immediate construction work."

The first application for a franchise to build a bridge at Candlestick Point was filed by Attorney Charles Carey of San Francisco, and was denied after many bitter debates. Carey was opposed by the San Francisco supervisors and by Peninsula people interested in the proposed Coyote Point bridge, the latter claiming that a bridge at Candlestick Point would materially damage the financial soundness of a structure just south of San Mateo. Carey is acting as attorney for Webb in this matter.

HERE AND THERE

Uncle Jimmy Bates of Columbus, Ky., is one old Confederate who has never been "reconstructed." When he lost his belongings in the flood this summer and the Red Cross furnished him clothing, including several pairs of nice blue socks, he roared: "I ain't no Yankee; I never wore the blue and never will." So they rummaged around and found him some gray socks.

In a bridge game at the Cavendish hotel in Bedford, Eng., after the cards had been regularly shuffled, the four players each drew a complete suit in the deal. A mathematical shark has figured that the chances against such an occurrence are 2,235,197,406,366,368 301,559,999 to 1. It may possibly happen again about the year 9999, we imagine.

Those of us who were old enough to follow the sporting pages in the '90's were often thrilled by the exploits of "Dummy" Taylor, famed deaf and dumb pitcher of the New York Giants. We had almost forgotten him altogether until he was recalled by a press dispatch which gave an account of his death a few days ago at Galesburg, Ill., at the age of 58.

While often the cause of reproach, a thick skull sometimes has its advantages. Such was the case when Charles D. B. King, negro President of the Republic of Liberia, was struck by a low bridge while yachting on the Thames near London recently. Although the impact of the bridge against his head felled him to the deck, he arose smiling and without serious injury.

One of those "believe it or not" stories which go the rounds of the press is reported from Kansas. The Kansas City Star is responsible for its circulation, and reports: "Mrs. Albert Tremain, wife of a Salina grocer, has a cat that on the Fourth of July gave birth to three kittens, one red, one white and one blue."

Some timely advice is contained in an editorial recently published in Galley Proof, a printers' periodical, which included this sentence: "The time has come to take our loss on a big bunch of worthless mental junk and dump it into the rubbish heap where it belongs."

BE CAREFUL!

With accidents increasing by the thousands every year, the subject of their prevention is engaging the earnest attention of individuals, employers, corporations, the press, the motor clubs, educational associations, city, state and national organizations.

Falls cause more deaths than any other form of accident, according to the National Safety Council, which is a clearing house of information relating to prevention of accidents, with headquarters in Chicago.

Automobile fatalities in the United States approximate 25,000 annually, it being estimated that almost 7,000 children alone were killed by automobiles last year in the United States.

In their own homes, thousands of people also lose their lives each year through accidents. Last year the number of such deaths reached 18,000, with falls leading.

A majority of all accidents of every description would be prevented if people would exercise proper care and caution.

SOUTH CITY TO SEEK PRIMARY PHONE RATE

The inclusion of the South San Francisco industrial area in the San Francisco primary telephone rate area will be sought before the railroad commission, according to an announcement of the South San Francisco Chamber of Commerce.

The project was originally fostered by the Manufacturer's Association, and the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce has taken action to give its support.

"We will be glad to co-operate with you in the matter of the inclusion of South San Francisco in the rate area of San Francisco," states a letter by Robert Newton Lynch, vice-president of the San Francisco Chamber of Manufacturers' Association.

The manufacturers point out that bay manufacturers enjoy an advantage over the peninsula of from 100 to 400 per cent in telephone tolls. South San Francisco factories are required to pay for San Francisco service on the basis of $40 to $50 per month for 500 messages, whereas manufacturers as far out as Albany and San Leandro on the east bay pay but $26 for the same Oakland service.

If the inclusion of South San Francisco in the San Francisco rate area is granted, industrial lands on the north peninsula will be on a par with the east bay as regards all public utilities. South San Francisco enjoys San Francisco switching charges and power rates already.

MAN has ever symbolized speed by devising such phrases as "Quick as a Flash" and "Wings of the Wind".

By the same token, the transmission of thought by speech can well be compared with the speed of light. For, truly, your voice by telephone to nearby or distant points, travels with the speed of light—instantly.

Long Distance telephone service to over 70,000 cities and towns in the United States and now to England, Scotland and Wales, places millions of people within reach of your own voice—with speed, economy and efficiency.

ATTEMPT AUTO TRIP TO ARCTIC CIRCLE

One of the most novel journeys ever attempted was started by the Honorable Mrs. Bruce and her husband when they recently left London in an automobile for the Arctic circle. A friend also accompanied them. The photograph shows the Bruce car surrounded by well wishers at the start of the journey.

Not Safe to Rely on People Along Road for Directions.

Telegraph poles always lead to cities. Road maps usually tell the truth. The sun and stars are helpful in determining directions. Instructions such as those above are so simple as to seem almost foolish, and yet they are often fundamental in successful touring.

How to Plan a Tour.

Even if you are one of those care-free motorists who likes to start out with no knowledge of his destination, it is best to secure a number of good road maps before planning a tour. Many motor clubs and associations furnish maps which are not only reliable but which indicate blazed trails. With a map of this kind, touring is simply a matter of following painted poles.

In traveling, don't rely on directions you get from people walking along the road. Directions obtained in this way are often surprisingly wrong. If you must ask some one about directions, hail a passing motorist, since a man in an automobile is more likely to be familiar with the surrounding country.

Troubles of Tourist.

Service station men say that most of the mechanical troubles encountered by tourists are of a minor sort. It is therefore a saving of time and money to know how to make minor repairs. Carry patches, cement, and a gasoline vulcanizer for your tires and tubes, and be sure, too, to have a good spare tire and tube. Learn how to remove, inflate and replace a tire. Put plenty of gasoline in the tank—a visible gauge, if your car is equipped with one, will help you keep the proper amount of gasoline. Keep the cooling system full of water. Before starting on a tour, it is a good plan to have your car looked over by a competent service man.

Automobile Light Glare Remedy Is Being Sought

Seeking for a remedy for headlight glare the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce voted a fund to support the research of the Society of Automobile Engineers and the United States bureau of standards in this field, at its annual meeting held in New York.

A fund also was voted to the highway education board for continuance of the annual national safety essay and lesson contest for which more than 500 prizes are given annually.

The meeting was devoted mainly to merchandising and transport problems.

Leaders in the business believe that better use of existing highways through building over passes and opening up dead-end streets, wider roads, by-pass roads, improved lighting, more modern garaging and other engineering factors will go far toward making traffic safer and more efficient.

Static Electricity Is Apt to Cause Explosion

Static electricity is apt to send a spark from the metal nozzle of the gasoline pump hose to the filler pipe of the gas tank when metal touches metal, and for this reason it is a good plan to tap the nozzle against the rear bumper or fender guards before inserting it in the filler pipe. Any spark that is about to be released then is less likely to start a fire, because it does not occur directly over the vapor from the gasoline tank.

It is also well to bear in mind always that there is more danger of an explosion from an empty gas tank than from one that is full. It is the vapor of gas that causes combustion, not the gasoline itself. A tank with just a little gas and a lot of air is an ideal mixture for an explosion. A tank that is nearly filled often will catch fire without exploding.

Foolish to Boast

of Great Descent

"Tracing one's ancestry is a rank fallacy," declares Albert Payson Terhune, who has just completed a year's study of genealogical research for the American Magazine and is now attacking the growing fad.

"In the first place few people realize that perhaps millions of ancestors, good and bad, have intervened between themselves and the illustrious person from whom they claim to have descended," he says in summing up his studies. "Secondly, several million other people, if they took the trouble, could boast of the same lineage. Thirdly, boasting of a great ancestor is a confession of inferiority if the descendant has not lived up to the repute of his forebear.

"The most common ancestral claim," says Mr. Terhune, illustrating the weakness of the average case, "is relationship to William the Conqueror. Simple arithmetic shows these facts: 'Science allows about thirty-three years to each generation, which shows that there have been 26 or more generations between a person living today and William the Conqueror, who was in his prime in 1066.

"The descendant had two parents, four grandparents, eight great-grandparents and so on. Continuing to double 26 times, it will show about forty million ancestors since 1066. So the descendant would have only a forty-millionth of the Conqueror's blood.

"In all Great Britain and France in 1066 there were not 40,000,000 people, so if anyone has had 40,000,000 ancestors since that date, he is certainly descended from William. Also he is descended from almost every robber and homicide and mendicant and genius and celebrity who happened to be alive in the Conqueror's time and earlier.

"The common fallacy is the result of tracing one particular line and ignoring a thousand other branches of a family. I know of one New Englander who succeeded in tracing his ancestry directly to Adam with just as much accuracy as many have traced theirs back to Charlemagne or other historical figures.

"Another barrier to effective genealogical research is the old-time system of family names adopted from residence or occupation. Thus John Hill, who lives on a hill, and John Church, who lived by the church, may have been the closest relatives, yet their descendants go off on wide tangents in tracing two families."

It is far better, says Mr. Terhune, to decree: "I had no ancestors to boast of, but you can bet my descendants are going to have."

"Red Tape" Hampering Business in Poland

Like most governments of countries in economic difficulties, the Polish government has tried to improve matters by a network of regulations and prohibitions. Goods can still only be imported with a license and until lately it was very hard to send money out of the country. Such regulations, if applied at all by a not too well co-ordinated or experienced administration, must apparently affect the small as well as the great.

When the London Daily News correspondent was sent a pipe as a birthday present, which had probably cost $1 or so, to receive it he had first to trudge off to the ministry of trade and industry for a special import license. One lady wanted to send 25 cents in currency to cover postage of a parcel, to a friend in England. She asked a post office official how to do this and he is said to have replied, gravely and politely: "First, madame, you must have the permission of the minister of finance."

Trains Vacuum-Cleaned

Using the principle employed by some garages in this country for quick cleaning of automobiles, a railway in France has installed large vacuum tunnels for its cars. All that is necessary is to pull a train through an archway lined with brushes and vacuum cleaning attachments, which are operated automatically, and the cars are thoroughly cleaned and polished when they emerge.

Earliest Lifeboat

In 1785 Lionel Lukin, a coachmaker of an inland town near London, put afloat on the Thames a Norway yawl which he had fitted with water-tight compartments, a heavy iron keel and other essentials in buoyancy and stability, which are the cardinal and requisite features of the lifeboat of today.

The thermostat works automatically inside of the iron and controls the heat so the iron is never too hot for ironing, but maintains always an even temperature.

Outwit Gasoline Thief

by Lock on Gas Tank

The tourist and auto camper often finds his gas tank mysteriously empty after a night spent in a strange camp or if the car has been stored in a strange garage. Petty thievery of this kind can be stopped by fitting a lock to your gas tank filler cap as shown in the illustration. The hasp and hinge are cut out of heavy sheet iron. The staple is obtainable in a hardware store.

Locking Your Gasoline Filler Cap in This Way Will Prevent Those Mysterious Losses of Gasoline That Sometimes Occur on Motor Tours.

ware store. Bend the end of the hinge so that the hasp will clear the nuts. Use long bolts and push them through the holes from the inside of the tank so that you can grasp the ends of the bolts with the pliers while you tighten the nuts. The ends of the bolts can then be cut off and hammered over so that there will be no chance of their loosening up. Use gaskets cut from vellumoid under the bolt heads.—Popular Science Monthly.

Spring Adjustment for New or Old Automobiles

When in the course of operation valve springs become weak, they should be stretched or else have a washer placed under them. If a car spring becomes so that one side of the vehicle sags, the addition of another leaf will remedy the trouble. In a new car it frequently happens that the owner finds cause for complaint in regard to hard riding, due to the fact that the springs are stiff. The difficulty may be obviated by removing a leaf, if so desired, but before long the new springs will limber up merely through ordinary usage.

FACTS -AND THE OPEN MIND

THE MOST important element in business success—and the most difficult—is to be sure that you have all the facts before you act.

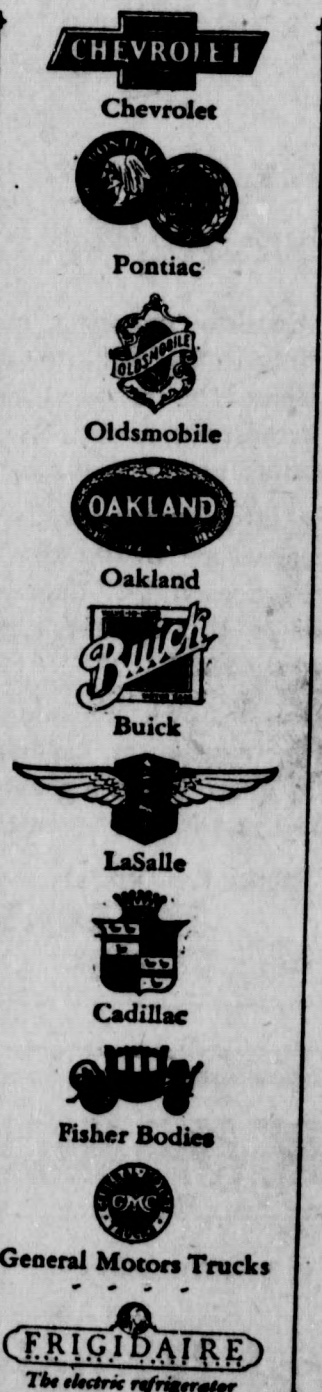

TO GET them all, from every possible source, is the first objective in General Motors. The Research Laboratories contribute some. These are nuggets, left in the crucible, after hundreds of ideas that looked good have been burned away. The Proving Ground contributes others. Dealers contribute. The public contributes. Every department contributes. Through the whole organization runs a spirit of inquiry and of rigid insistence on proof.

OUT OF such thinking come the new models announced from time to time by Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Oakland, Buick, LaSalle, Cadillac—all with Fisher Bodies. And by Frigidaire. Each new model is a tested step forward. Nothing goes into it as a result of habit or guess or pride of opinion.

Nothing counts but hard-won facts, gathered and used with an open mind.

NEW COMPENSATION STATUS OF FARMERS

The following statement, recently issued by the Industrial Accident Commission, is of paramount importance to the employers of California:

Assembly Bill No. 997, modifying the elective provisions of the Workmen's Compensation, Insurance and Safety Act "with respect to the acceptance of the act by persons engaged in farm, dairy, agricultural, viticultural or horticultural employment, and in stock or poultry raising," becomes effective September 1, 1927. What this new law actually does is to lay upon the farmer the responsibility of either electing to accept the act by taking out a policy of compensation insurance or of specifically rejecting the act in the manner set forth in the law.

The farmer who desires to comply with the provisions of Assembly Bill No. 997 by electing to come under the act may do so by providing compensation insurance coverage for his employees. It will not be necessary to notify the Industrial Accident Commission that this has been done.

The farmer who desires to comply with the provision of Assembly Bill No. 997 by rejecting the act may do so by posting a notice to that effect "in a conspicuous place at his place of employment where it may conveniently be seen and read by his employees," and "filing a copy of the same, with proof of posting of the original with the Industrial Accident Commission." Forms to be used in rejecting the act will be sent free by the commission upon application therefor. The proof of posting affidavit may be sworn to before a Notary Public, justice of the peace, city or county clerk, or any person authorized to administer oaths.

The farmer who fails to comply with the provisions of the bill by either electing to come under the act or by rejecting the act, will be conclusively presumed to have accepted the provisions of the act, and, therefore, subject to all the provisions and penalties of the Workmen's Compensation, Insurance and Safety Act.

AN EARLY TIME TABLE

The first railroad time table published in the South, issued at Charleston in 1830, announcing the schedule for a short line out of that city, contained a provision which would appear amusing to present-day travelers. It gave the information that arrangements for special trips could be made "by agreeing with the engineer."

There was only one locomotive in service on the road. It was the "Best Friend of Charleston," the first locomotive built in America, and weighed only about four tons. It arrived in Charleston from the West Point foundry in New York city by ship on October 23, 1830, and was put in regular service on Christmas Day of the same year. The first time table, which has been preserved, contained the following information:

"The Public are respectfully informed that the Railroad Company has purchased from Mr. E. L. Miller his Locomotive Steam Engine and that it will hereafter be constantly employed in the transportation of passengers."

"The times of leaving the station in Line street will be 8 o'clock, at 10 a. m., at 1 and at half past 3 o'clock p. m."

"Parties may be accommodated at the intermediate hours by agreeing with the Engineer. Great punctuality will be observed in the time of starting."

But perhaps 100 years from now people will look upon the facilities and practices of the present day with as much amusement as we now find in looking back upon those of a century ago.

DEATH OF RICH NEGRO

Press dispatches gave lengthy notices of the death of Alonso F. Herndon, millionaire negro of Atlanta, who died recently at the age of 69.

Herndon was president of the Atlanta Life Insurance Company, which maintains offices in eight states and has more than 700 employees. He was also president of a large cemetery association for negroes, owned a chain of Atlanta barber shops in which 42 negro barbers serve white customers only, and also owned much valuable real estate in the heart of the city.

When the Atlanta city council passed an ordinance prohibiting negro barbers from serving white patrons a few months ago, many prominent white citizens supported Herndon in his contest which resulted in his being permitted to continue his shops.

Herndon's career demonstrates that a negro who has character and ability can make a success in life, even in the South.

Unlike the railroads, the telephone and telegraph companies are operating under daylight saving time wherever daylight saving is being observed.

There is now one automobile in use for every five persons in the United States.

China has few cows, most of the milked used being imported condensed brands.

Fortunately, the noise of the airplane propeller is discouraging to back-seat drivers.

DRIVER'S LICENSE RENEWAL EXPLAINED

It seems that some motorists have misinterpreted that section of the amended California motor law which has to do with the renewal of driver's licenses which have been carried three years or more.

The legal department of the National Automobile Club clears up this point in the following explanation: Examination is not required of every motorist who has carried a license for three years. The amendment to Section 69 merely makes it possible for the Division of Motor Vehicles to require an examination if it sees fit to do so. All licenses of three years or more outstanding may at any time be cancelled, according to the amendment. This will weed out a lot of superfluous material from the division records and give an opportunity to examine drivers whose record is not good.

The average motorist will have no trouble whatever in getting his license renewed. Nor will the average motorist be required to submit to an examination.

Some, who have been involved in too many accidents previously, or who have too many black marks against their driving record, may be denied a renewal.

Priscilla Moran, eight-year-old orphan and film star, will not be permitted to appear in motion pictures for the present, by order of a Los Angeles court which placed her in custody of an aunt.

A statistical shark has figured that Americans drink 75,000 cups of coffee every second. And no telling how many saucers.

THE HARD TIME

There comes a time, a darn hard time,
When the skies of life look cloudy;
And you're wishin' that the darn ol' sun
Would peep through and say
"Howdy."

You wish that you were not alive;
It seems that you're tied with fetters;
But never mind these things at all,
It sure will come out better.

If you are man or woman enough,
You'll stay, an' stick right to it.
Though you think things look too hard,
You'll take you task and do it.

There comes a time, a darn hard time,
When the skies of life look cloudy;
But just the same, the dear ol' sun
Will come through and say
"Howdy!"

—W. H. Price.

Shorty: "Ah tell you, man, George wuz de honestest man wot ever wuz bo'n."

Long Boy: "Den how come dey close all de banks on his birthday?"

"What's that mark on your forehead?"
"That's a birthmark."
"Yes?"
"Yep, tried to get into the wrong berth."

A rented house is never quite a home. To the outsider it may have all the earmarks, but it falls short in the one great respect. You can never say or feel "It's our own."

Don't wait until it is too late! Repair it when the trouble starts.

Judge (to victim of hold-up): "While you were being relieved of your valuables, did you call the police?"
Victim: "Yes, your Honor, everything I could think of."

"I think you said that you had a brother in the mining business, didn't you, Rastus?"

"Yeh, boss, that's right."
"What kind of mining—gold mining, silver mining, copper mining?"
"No, sah; kalsomin-ing, sah."

Mary had a little lamb,
The plot begins to thicken;
She sold it to a restaurant,
And now they call it chicken.

"Gee, there are a lot of girls who don't want to get married." "And how do you know?" "I've asked them."
